

forever in your heart

When Is It Time to Say Goodbye?

Unfortunately there is no easy way to answer this question. However, we have found that caring pet owners always know when the time has come to say goodbye.

Upon quiet reflection and when you are ready, you will step back and assess the current situation of your pet from a caring objective view of his quality of life.

The best way to find the answer is to ask yourself these questions. Through this reflection process, the solution will come.

- Why is your pet still here?
- Are there more good days than bad?
- Is there more pleasure than pain?
- Are treatments giving him a good quality of life?
- Is he here more for your sake than his own?

Deep down, the answers that surface from these questions will give you the solution you are searching for.

You know your pet best and you can tell if he is suffering more than he should. If you are reading this, there is no question that you have taken wonderful care of your friend. And you will know when the time comes to let go. What is most important is that you consider the needs of your pet over your own. Read the other articles in this section to help you make this decision.

Please contact us if you need support.

info@faithfulpetfriends.com

574.389.9900

877.981.9900